"Edgar! " Anatole Baudruche and Edgar Bricneon were two old college chums. They had not met since the day when they took their bachelor of arts degree together, twelve years before. In spite of this long interval in their intercourse, they found on the occasion of this sudden meeting that they had very little ready change of conversation. Edgar was the first to speak. "Say, your hat looks very pretty," he

"Do not speak of it. It has just served as a target for a potato that fell from the fifth story."

"And now you are going upstairs to restore the potato to its owner? That's very nice of you." "Not by any means! I'm going to charge the clumsy devil with this crime-try to make him pay for a new hat."

"Well, so far as that is concerned, you might as well tackle a corpse." "And why, if you please?"
"Because old Bidoche is an old hedge hog who will kick you downstairs, even if he opens the door for you at all."
"Old Bidoche?"

"Yes, the man you are after, for it can be no other than he. All the tenants in the building are always having trouble with him. One might think that he made a point of being as disagreeable to every one as he possibly can." "Then do you live in this house?" "No; but an aunt of mine does, and scarcely a day passes without her hav-ing a scrap with old Bidoctie. If you will allow me, I will go up with you; two heads are better than one in a mat-ter like this." So Edgar and Anatole went up three flights together and stopped outside a door, through which came softly the
